

The Module Grades Database

Note: If you are viewing this document through GitHub (which will mostly be the case), you will be unable to search in the file or click links in it. This is because GitHub renders this file as images. If this is needed, it is suggested that you download the file (see below) if possible or use the Excel version.

Important notes:

1. This compilation of the module averages has been taken from publicly available sources, mainly the website <https://www.whatdotheyknow.com>. References are available in both the Excel and PDF versions.
2. Only module codes have been included here. The module name for a given code can be found using the Course catalogue, Module catalogue or MMS.
3. While compiling the data, there have been a few instances wherein two FOI requests for the same piece of data returned different results. In this case, the older result (in this case, the one which is already in the database) is retained.
4. The results have been obtained by taking the unweighted average of all available scores for that module throughout the years. Please note that this can mean an inappropriate representation of the module in some cases, especially if there are only one or two data points or the number of students taking the module are few.
5. If there are new FOI requests or if I have missed something (whether it be a typo or a wrong score), please let me know, either through a Facebook message or by sending an email to dm282@st-andrews.ac.uk, so that I can quickly update this document. This will help many students who can continue to use this document for finding the module averages.
6. Results with the designation "S38(1)(b)" mean that the score has not reported as there were too few students who took the module. It is treated in the same way as if data was not available.
7. The averages per module year (i.e, 2000 level modules etc) and per department are available in the Excel sheet Statistics or its equivalent in the PDF version. Use the Excel version to get both (for example, average grade of all 3000 level modules in Computer Science). This can be done by expanding the PivotTable in the Statistics worksheet.
8. This is an unofficial document and has not been compiled with the support of anyone except the author himself.

Percentiles

The percentile of a module is the percentage of modules with an average grade below the specified module. It is taken from all modules for which there is an average score available.

Suppose the percentile of a module is 75. Then this means that 75% of modules scored the same or lower than this module.

The module with the top average grade will have a percentile of 100, and the lowest-scoring module will hence have a percentile of 0.

The arrows in a result give an indication of that:

-  - top 10% (percentile [90%, 100%])
-  - top 30% (percentile [70%, 90%])
-  - top 55% (percentile [45%, 70%])
-  - bottom 45% (percentile [20%, 45%])
-  - bottom 20% (percentile [0%, 20%])

The Excel worksheet Percentile to score – or its equivalent in the PDF version – contains the table for finding out the percentile of a module given its average score, or vice versa.

PDF and Excel versions

The PDF version (i.e, this version) will have versioning, and will be updated whenever there are changes in the Excel version. This means that the Excel version can be treated more as a development version, as I can be making changes to it at any time, though the probability of you seeing this at any given time should be low.

The Excel version can be used for further analysis; for example, one could analyse the distribution of average grades per level for a department.

Licensing: This document is licensed under CC 4.0 BY ND. In particular, you may not publish any derivatives of this document anywhere publicly. Instead, please let me know of any new FOI requests as stated before; this will help many students who need not have to search through multiple requests. Exceptions are possible.

Changelog

- V1.2 (16/6/19) – added some more modules, reduced number of “S38(1)(b)” cases. The bar shown in the average grades section now varies by percentile rather than absolute value, and now ‘varies’ better.
- V1.1 (31/5/19) – added EN3000/4000 modules and updated some IR and history modules.
Formatting improvements
- V1.0 (22/5/19) – Initial release

TABLE 1: Contains the average grade for each module.
